Introduction

Welcome to KUALA LUMPUR

Kuala Lumpur is set to be a world class city. In addition to being the country's commercial and financial hub, Kuala Lumpur offers various attractions for visitors, an interesting combination of old and new. Heritage buildings stand adjacent to hi-tech skyscrapers. Modern malls cater to discerning shoppers yet traditional bazaars and night markets are ever popular. After sundown one can choose to either retreat to the peace and quiet of the suburbs or revel in the dazzling city nightlife.

Kuala Lumpur provides excellent facilities when it comes to hotel accommodation, transportation, shopping, dining, entertainment, leisure and recreation and has many interesting sites and attractions to offer visitors. But over and above all these, the most fascinating aspect of Kuala Lumpur is its people. Our warm, friendly and hospitable multi-racial society creates and reflects variety: food, arts and crafts, culture, history and festivities that provide a spectacular environment to the city. Truly, there is so much to see and do.

THE BUSINESS AND LEISURE CAPITAL

An important catalyst in the transformation of Kuala Lumpur into a world-class business centre has been the fast-growing M.I.C.E. (meetings, incentives, conventions, exhibitions) sector. The Malaysian Government, industry players and participants thus place great emphasis on this sector of the economy.

Kuala Lumpur supports business and this is evident in the infrastructure and facilities it offers which will satisfy even the most fastidious organiser and client. The city's business-friendly side is best advertised by the many highly successful international events it hosts annually. They attest to the efficiency of its M.I.C.E. facilities, the logistics support services and personnel.

Most of these hotels as well as convention centres are located in or around Kuala Lumpur's Golden Triangle and the Central Business District. This brings participants right into the thick of the action, while at the same time allowing them to sample the sights and sounds of a city throbbing with its rich history and cultural diversity side by side hi-tech modern systems.

Indeed Kuala Lumpur's reputation as an international business centre is only rivalled by her appeal as a tourist haven. There is so much to see and savour and the good tropical climate allows year-round access to recreational facilities and sports including golf. After a busy day of meetings, one can also opt for night golf.

The corporate traveller with a view to combining business with pleasure can have an unforgettable trip. The city is fast gaining a reputation as a shoppers paradise. The nightlife is vibrant. Where food is concerned, spoil for choice is the only expression to use. Even dining in the hotels can be a gastronomical experience, what with the wide variety of multi-ethnic local fare and international cuisine.

Getting around Kuala Lumpur is very convenient as taxis are plentiful and cheap; they can be hailed by the roadside or via radio-phone paging. The Light Rail Transit system and KTM commuter train service add to the comfort and ease of fast travel within the city and to its outskirts. Those using buses can travel cheaply and in air-conditioned comfort.

The local currency is the Ringgit and sen. There are 100 sen in a Ringgit. Foreign currency or travellers cheques can be changed at any bank. Licensed money changers located at the airport, international hotels and within the city sometimes offer better rates than banks. Travellers cheques are also accepted by hotels and major department stores but banks give the best rates. Credit cards are widely accepted and outlets that accept cards will display signs.

PEOPLE & CULTURE

Malaysia is multiracial and peace-loving, a melting pot of indigenous and immigrant groups. The largest ethnic group is the Malays, followed by the Chinese, Indians and other races.

The national language is Bahasa Melayu and official religion is Islam and the other races are free to practise their own religion, customs and daily rituals. In Malaysia, cultures have been mixing since the beginning of history. Today, the many different cultures of its people have blended to create contemporary Malaysia's uniquely diverse heritage.

An example of an extraordinary cultural exchange is the Malay wedding ceremony which incorporates elements of the Hindu tradition of southern India - the bride and groom dress in gorgeous brocades, sit in state and feed each other with yellow rice, with hands painted with henna.

Muslims have also adopted the Chinese custom of giving little red packets of money called ang pau during Chinese New Year. But the packets given during Hari Raya Aidilfitri are green and greetings are written in Arabic script.

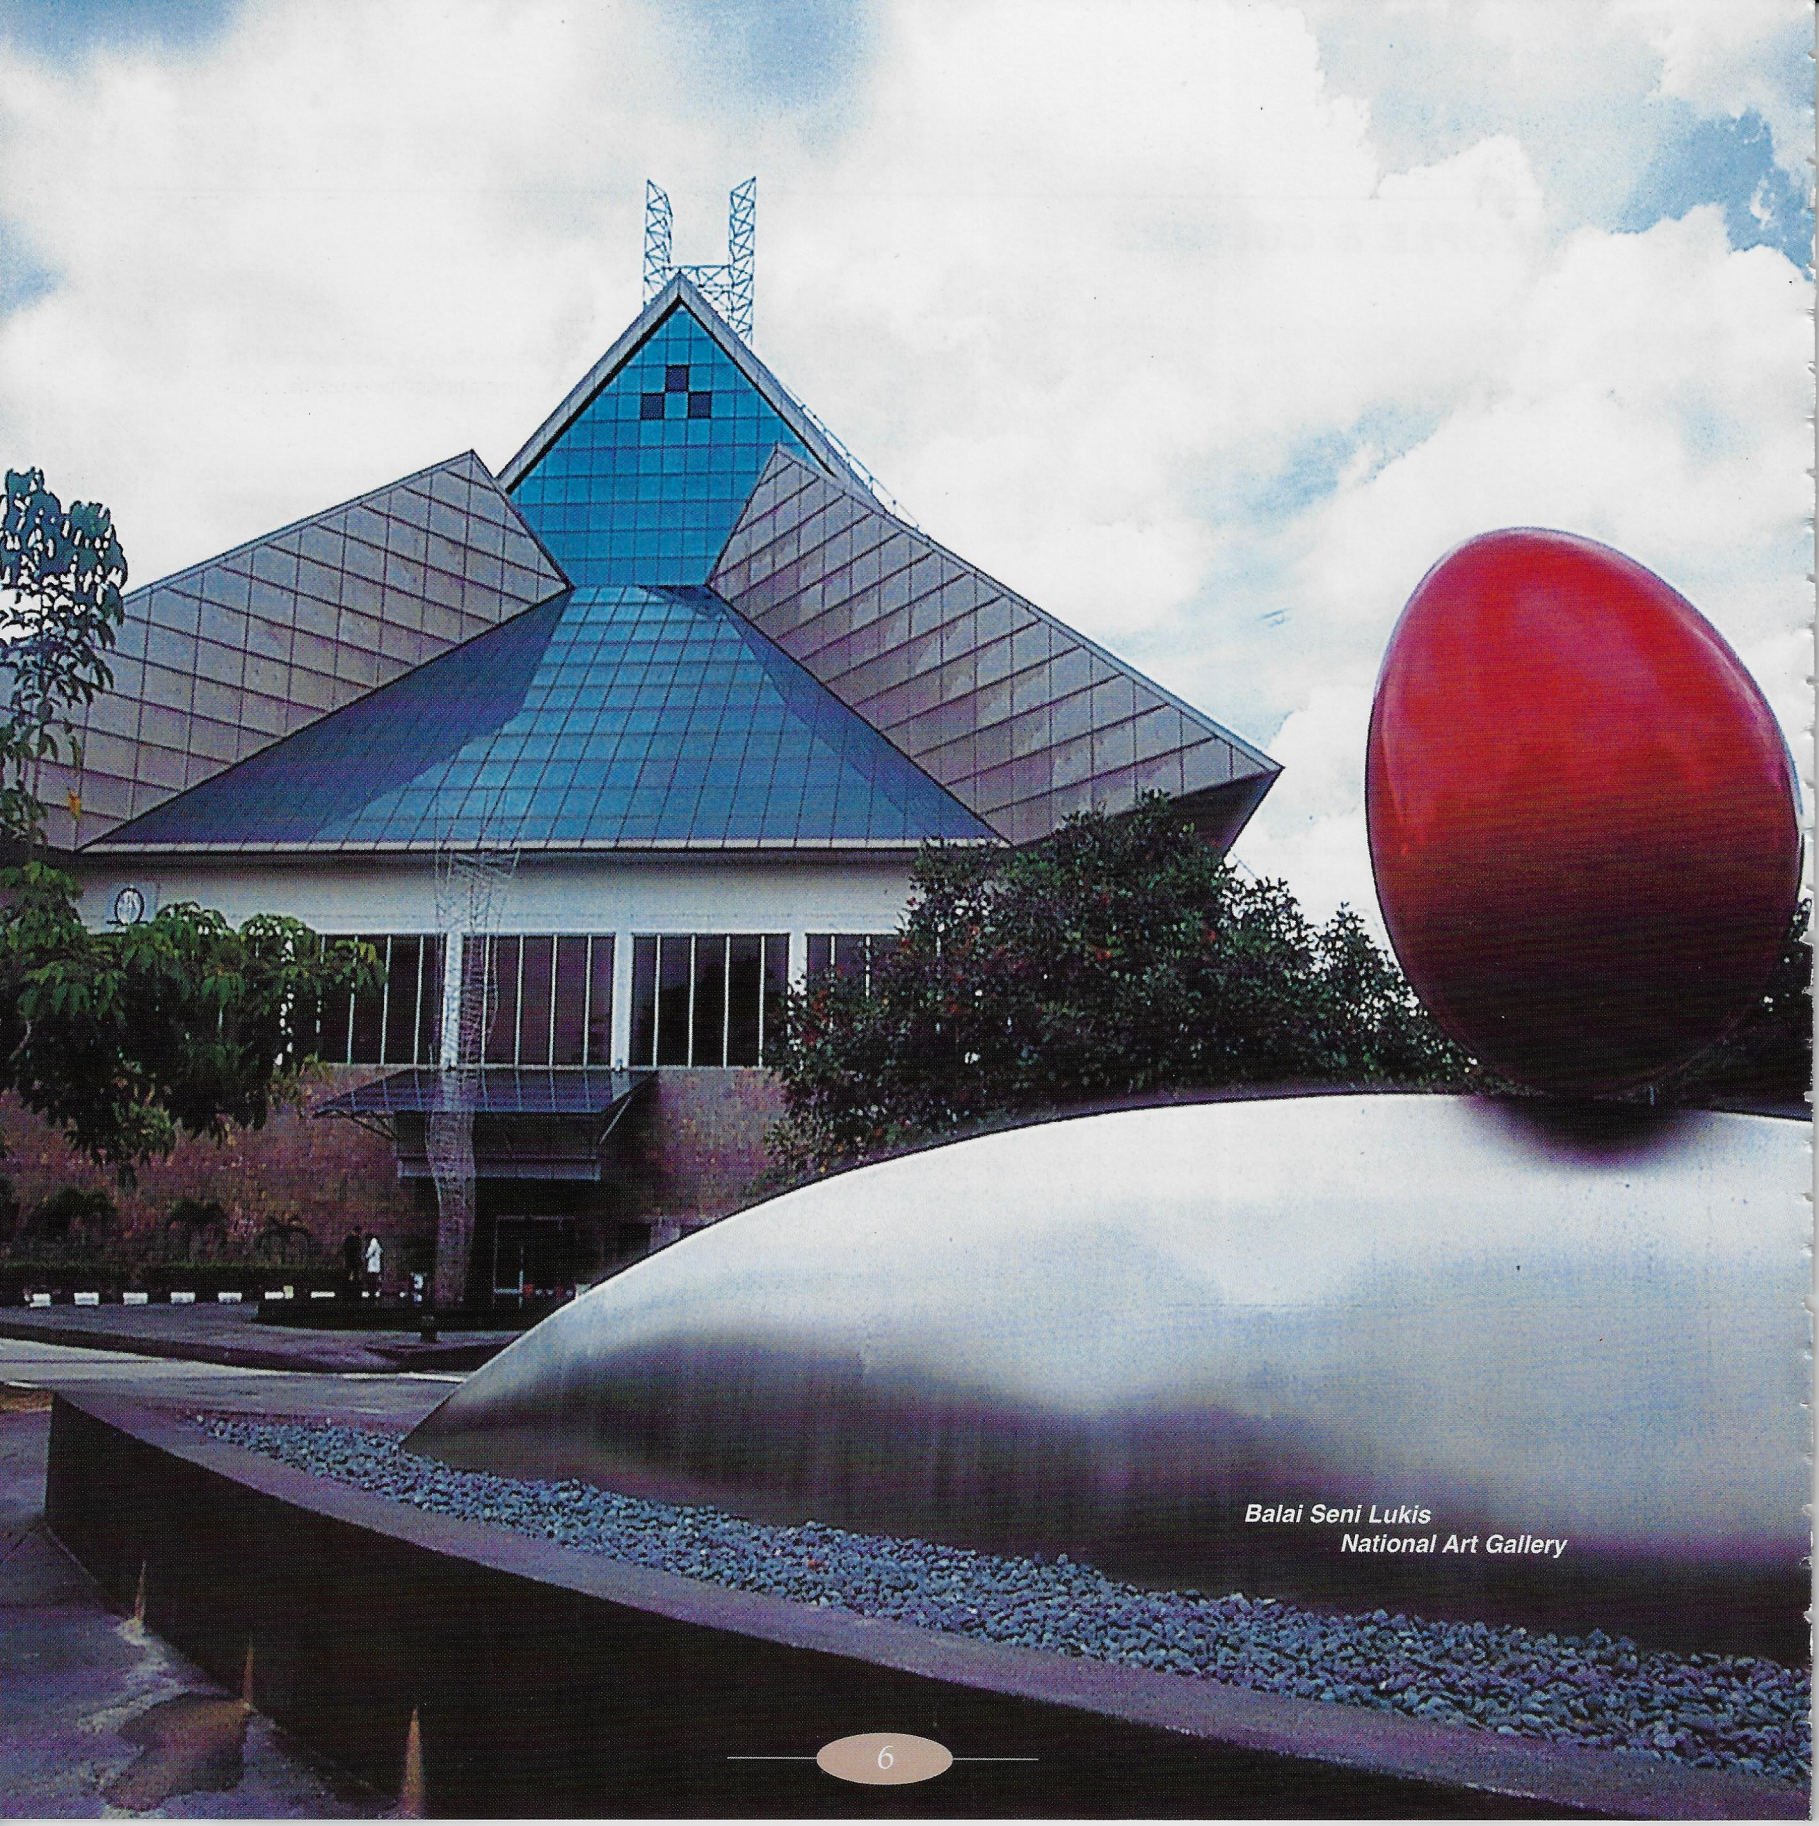

The Chinese people love excitement, and their culture is rich in customs, traditions and superstitions. Chinese New Year and other festivals like the lantern festival are times of joyous celebrations. Most common are the dragon and lion dances for good luck and prosperity.

The Indian culture is also steeped in specific ceremonies for specific occasions.

In Kuala Lumpur and elsewhere in the country, the most enlightening way to understand our complex cultural interaction is to observe the open-house policy during festivals where Malaysians open their doors to members of other cultures - to tourists as well as neighbours.

Such inclusiveness is what fosters understanding and tolerance that form Malaysia's progress.

urban Kuala Lumpur's transportation network.

Commuter Trains

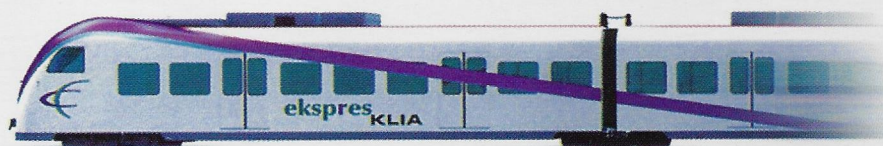

KTM Komuter operates speedy electric train services from KL Sentral Station to designated points in the city and to Port Klang, Seremban, Kajang and Rawang.

Taxis

This feature will interest companies planning for new product launches and exhibition organisers with huge items to display in a luxurious setting.

The Training Hall, about half the size of the Main Arena, is ideal for holding conventions, exhibitions and seminars. It is fully air-conditioned and has dedicated private rooms for smaller functions and meetings.

Conference Facilities

PUTRA STADIUM

This multi-purpose, fully air-conditioned indoor stadium is designed not only as a world-class sports centre but also an ideal venue for conferences, expositions, gatherings and concerts. Visitors have open, unobstructed access to the stadium from the surrounding pedestrian plazas. Entrances are conveniently located on three sides of the building.

The Putra Stadium has numerous venues for conventions, seminars and exhibitions. The largest is the Main Arena followed by the Training Hall, the foyers on levels 3 and 4, and many smaller private function rooms located on two basement floor levels.

The 70m by 40m Main Arena is girdled by 13,000 upholstered permanent seats. This rectangular indoor arena is built like a black box where no light can penetrate, thus making it highly suitable for light shows, video presentations and the like - where complete darkness is imperative.

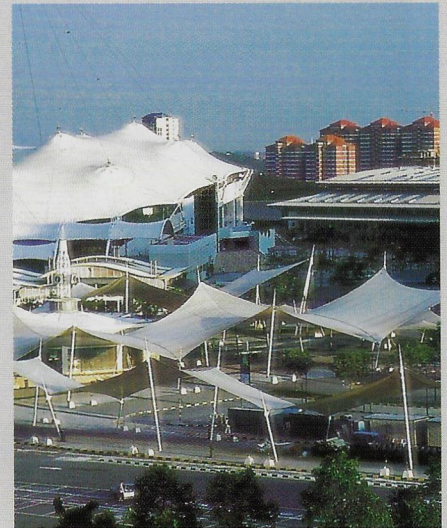

A four-sided full colour matrix unit is part of the high-tech features of the Main Arena. There are also an advanced sound system with 103dB power and a pre-programmed floodlighting system providing up to 1,500 lux power. They are controlled from a series of designated rooms on the 5th level.

The spacious backdoor to the arena can facilitate loading of materials for stage build-up and preparatory work for events to be held. The large external courtyard which links the stadium and training hall serves as a loading area. It is spacious enough to accommodate 14 40ft containers to enable speedy construction and dismantling of specialist apparatus in the arena.

The Training Hall, about half the size of the Main Arena, is ideal for holding conventions, exhibitions and seminars. It is fully air-conditioned and has dedicated private rooms for smaller functions and meetings. A series of rooms house control centres for lighting while a public address sound system is available on request.

The foyer areas on levels 3 and 4 encircling the entrances to the Main Arena can also serve as areas for conventions, seminars and exhibitions. But due to its open concept, it is more suitable for exhibitions as such areas need high pedestrian traffic.

The function rooms are located on the two basement floor levels below the main concourse level. They can also serve as venues for smaller seminars, conferences and even exhibitions.

The Putra Stadium can accommodate 16,000 spectators on 13,000 upholstered permanent seats and 3,000 retractable seats. More seats can be placed in the arena if needed, bringing the total seating capacity to over 16,000.

It has ample open and covered parking facilities and is easily accessible via the KESAS Highway, Seremban (North-South) Highway and Damansara-Puchong Highway. It is also directly serviced by Star LRT at Bukit Jalil.

Its Plenary Hall is ideal for large-scale conventions, banquets and concerts.

Sprawling over 160,000 sq m and with 35,000 sq m of exhibition space, PWTC adjoins a 40-storey office tower block, Menara Dato' Onn, and an upmarket hotel.
